THE IMAGE OF THE SEA. The sea up to that time had been generally regarded by painters a liquidly composed level-seeking consistent thing, with a smooth surface, rising to a watermark on ships, in which ships were to be scientifically imbedded and wetted up to watermark, and to remain dry above the same. THE UNPARDONABLE SIN.

BY NATHANIEL HAWTHORN. Bertram, the lime-burner, a rough and eavy looking man, begrimed with charcoal set watching the kiln at nightfall, while his ittle son played at building houses with the shattered fragments of marble, when, on the hillside below them, they heard a roar of aughter, not mirthful, but slow, and solemn, even like a wind shaking the boughs of the

"Father, what is that !" asked the little boy leaving his play and pressing betwixt his father's knees.

"Oh, some reveller, I suppose," answered the lime-burner; "some merry fellow from the bar-room in the village, who dared not laugh loud enough within doors lest he should blow the roof of the house off. So, here he is, shaking his jolly side at the foot of

"But father," said the child, more sensitive than the obtuse, middle-aged clown, "he does not laugh like a man that is glad; so the noise frightens me!"

"Don't be a fool, child!" cried the father, gruffly; "you will never make a man, I do believe there is too much of your mother in you. I have known the rustling of a leaf to startle her. Hark, here comes the merry fellow now. You shall see that there is no

The place where this man lived has been pointed out to the writer by one who knew him, and remembered his calebrated horse. Mr. Morgan had a few acres of land, and usually kept one or two commer, and taught music in his own and neighboring towns, during the winters. In tee aprint of 1694, he raised a golt which has given celebrity to his name. Mr. Morgan had a passion for good horses, and this cult, while he remained in West Springfield was more fully appreciated by his owner than his fellow townsmen. In those days 250 was considered a great price for a horse and it is believed that this horse could have been bought for about that sum. Fortune frowned upon Mr. Morgan, and, seized with the spirit of adventure, about the year 1768, he migrated with his family and have been conscious of the results, when ever the horse is known, there shall the desert to Arabia. Sonk the earth to the depth one or even two feet, and the plants, which is at least as far as the branches extend in trees, and to double the extent in small specimens, such as roseoushes. Previous to watering, remove a few inches of the surface soil, and replace afterwards. If the soil is mulched removing the soil is not necessary.

III. The present is a good time to drain and. Help can be easily, got at reasonable rates, and there is always considerable time to spare during this month. When you do drain, work according to a plan, and you will not at any future time find it necessary to relay with larger tile, or sink your drains
